Day 6

This morning I decided with Mike's agreement to not do the clinical trial and go with Kaiser from start to finish. I feel really good about this. I totally trust Dr. Crawford and Kaiser has been a great health plan for me. It will be great to have everything done closer to home so we don't spend so many hours in the car getting over to the U. Also I'm dear that I don't want to spend the next 3 years in clinics, getting tests and at the beck and call of the U for the trial. So I'll go through the standard of care treatment called the STUPP protocol with Kaiser and with my strength and health and positive attitude I will come through this well.

Mike and I met with our accountant to put together a trust for our kids. Still a lot of paperwork to do but I will feel better when this document is complete along with updated wills. So much to do before surgery, we really should have done this months ago but we are doing it now and I think we can get it complete next week.

I've heard from many friends and family and everyone has been so supportive. I'm a very lucky person to have so many wonderful people in my life.

8:10

Feeling really tired - off to bed. I just had a long talk with my tumor, which I'm calling G110, and let him know that he is an uninvited intruder and he needs to leave my head. I think he heard me.
